The world of MotoGP is fascinating and composed of different categories, each with its own characteristics and regulations. In this article, we'll clarify the differences between Moto3, Moto2, and MotoGP, and we'll look at a remarkable feat by the South African Brad Binder. During an official MotoGP training session at Mugello in 2024, he reached a speed of 366.1 km/h, breaking the previous record of 363.6 km/h set by Jorge Martín at the same track in 2024.

Moto3, Moto2 ou MotoGP?

MotoGP can be seen as the pinnacle of motorcycle sports, offering powerful and advanced technologies. The Moto3 and Moto2 series are also part of the World Championship and have their own peculiarities. Let's look at these differences more closely.

Moto3

In this category, riders use single-cylinder four-stroke engines. Replacing the old two-stroke 125cc engine with a more powerful and less polluting one, proportionally reducing the competition.

Moto2

A Moto2 is considered a degraded
