As a NBA Desenvolvimento Liga. This league, now known as the NBA Development League, was created in 2001 as a minor league for the NBA. The league's primary purpose was to provide a platform for young players to develop their skills and gain experience before being drafted into the NBA. The league's structure was similar to the NBA, with 30 teams and a regular season followed by playoffs. The league's success was measured by the number of players who were drafted into the NBA, with 100 players being drafted in the first year and 150 in the second year. The league's revenue was also significant, with the league generating $100 million in revenue in its first year and $150 million in its second year. The league's success was a result of its focus on player development and its strong relationships with the NBA.

Agreement on the Major League Baseball (MLB) and the NBA Development League (NBA D-League) was reached in 2005. The agreement provided for the league to be renamed the NBA Development League and to be affiliated with the NBA. The league's structure was also revised, with the number of teams reduced to 30 and the league's focus shifted to player development. The league's success was measured by the number of players who were drafted into the NBA, with 100 players being drafted in the first year and 150 in the second year. The league's revenue was also significant, with the league generating $100 million in revenue in its first year and $150 million in its second year. The league's success was a result of its focus on player development and its strong relationships with the NBA.
